As patron of the 2015 class, Thierry Marx aims at providing EDHEC students support and will share with them his experience and expertise in the creative industry.

"We are delighted to work with Thierry Marx. He is a man, who, over the recent years, has managed to think outside the box, not only in his work on molecular gastronomy but also by becoming socially committed, in particular with his work within the prison system." said Isabelle Sequeira, Director of the MSc in Creative Business. "By choosing Thierry Marx as patron of this year's class, we wanted to show students that creative business permeates all sectors. To complement the participation of Thierry Marx, we have planned to introduce a course on gastro-diplomacy"

The MSc in Creative Business offers first-class training to students who wish to work in the arts, culture, entertainment or social innovation. It addresses the needs of the creative industries that are always on the lookout for new talents in the fields of social and entrepreneurial innovation.
